Downtown is losing some great people. Friends I have encouraged to move down have left recently or are now leaving. Incidents happen every single day multiple times a day on Spring Street 24 hours a day. Been downtown 15 years and I can honestly say I don't enjoy day to day life anymore. I worry every time I step on the street and I'm not a timid guy. Not sure why I'm posting this, it feels pointless.

One of my closest friends just got robbed on 6th Street historic core. (More details to follow)

She was hit & pushed to the floor by an African American male that then grabbed her purse and took off.

She's too shaken to even deal with the cops, she's now home crying and dealing with her emotions and trauma.

This place has become more intolerable over the past 2 years, she's one of the long term residents, over 13 years but she's also giving up on the fight she can't take it anymore.

Dear neighbors, please stay safe.

About four years ago (back when the quality of DTLA life had started to seriously slip), I'd been accosted two days in a row by the same meth head...once on 4th between Spring and Main (I swung at him with the bag of garlic and ginger I'd bought at Grand Central, and he ran), and again the very next day in front of the Spring Arcade Famima.

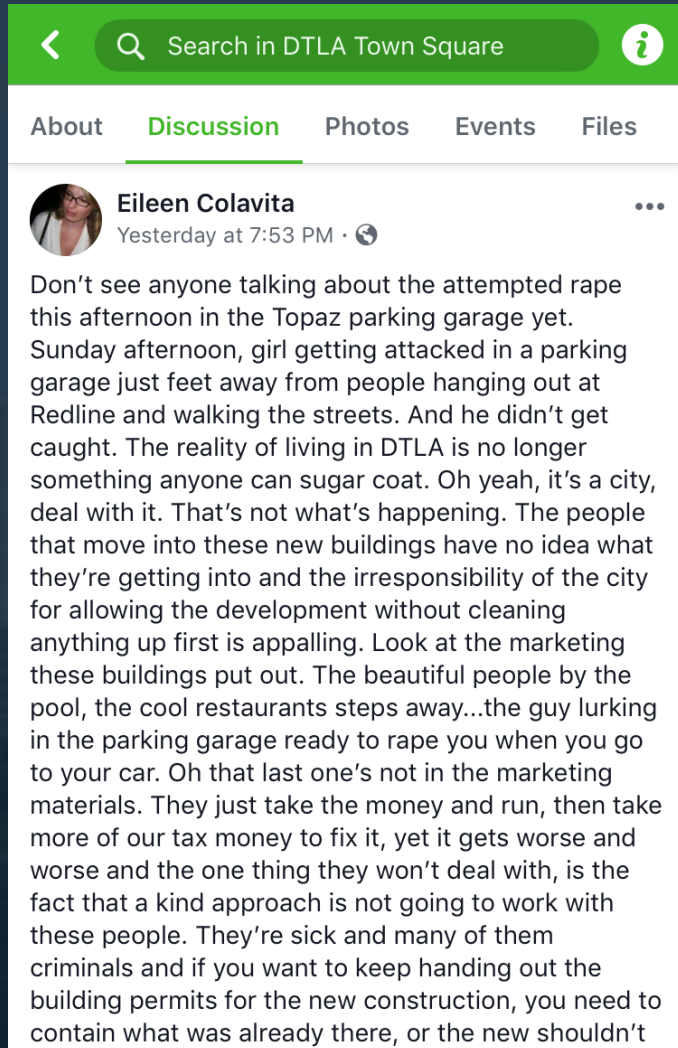

I took my mom's brass duck-head cane with me the day after that, and asked a cop in front of me in line at Starbucks what my liability would be if I used it to defend myself. He said that, if I carried it like I was using it as a cane and had to hit an attacker with it, I'd be fine. But if I carried it like a weapon (say, across my body), I'd be considered the threat.

But 2018 is feeling far more dangerous than 2014, and I'm often tempted to carry one of these in addition to my little vial of pepper spray. If I **was** carrying the cane or the bat or the putter, and the guy who slammed the girl to the ground yesterday came at me, and I couldn't get out of his way, and hit him before he hit me...what would my liability be? Slo Martinez? Sarge Flanagan? Deon Joseph?

Just witnessed an altercation at 7th and Spring. One guy threw a flaming bottle at another guy. It hit the ground and exploded. Happened right in front of us. We would have been hit if we didn't run.

On Monday, June 25th at approximately 6pm Mikhail was walking his dog in front of his apartment in downtown Los Angeles walking his dog with a few friends on their way to get dinner. Suddenly, he was struck in the face by a violent homeless man armed with a 2x4 embedded with nails.

<http://www.foxla.com/news/local-news/video-shows-good-samaritan-using-flying-kick-to-take-down-violent-transient-only-on-fox->

His upper lip was ripped open, part of his nose was torn from his face and he broke his hand in the ensuing chaos when he fell. The full extent of his injuries is not yet known. His first trip to a local hospital for 2 days of treatment created an even worse situation with infection affecting both his hand and nose. Due to the infection, Mikhail required another visit to an emergency room spending 2 more days in treatment. Finally he met with a plastic surgeon who will determine how to repair the damage, his ongoing care and healing.

Although Mikhail is a working photographer, he does not have health insurance and his injuries are sufficient enough to prevent him from working. While he expects to undergo multiple surgeries to rebuild his nose and upper lip he will require some assistance with rent and bills over the next 2-3 months while he recovers.

Currently he requires approximately $20,000 to cover his immediate rent and living expenses for the next 2 months and another $25,000 to cover his hospital bills, reconstructive surgery, medications, wound care and other unknown expenses.

Mikhail is a very humble and hard working guy who is encouraged by his friends and family. He is very deserving of all the help he can get in this time of need. Please help us to help our neighbor.

This happened around 2:30 this afternoon in front of SB Grand. This piece of shit hit this poor girl and then hit me. Luckily I was able to follow him down Broadway to 7th where the police arrested him. Do any of you know this girl? I have an incident report if she would like to press charges as well. I'm hoping she does!

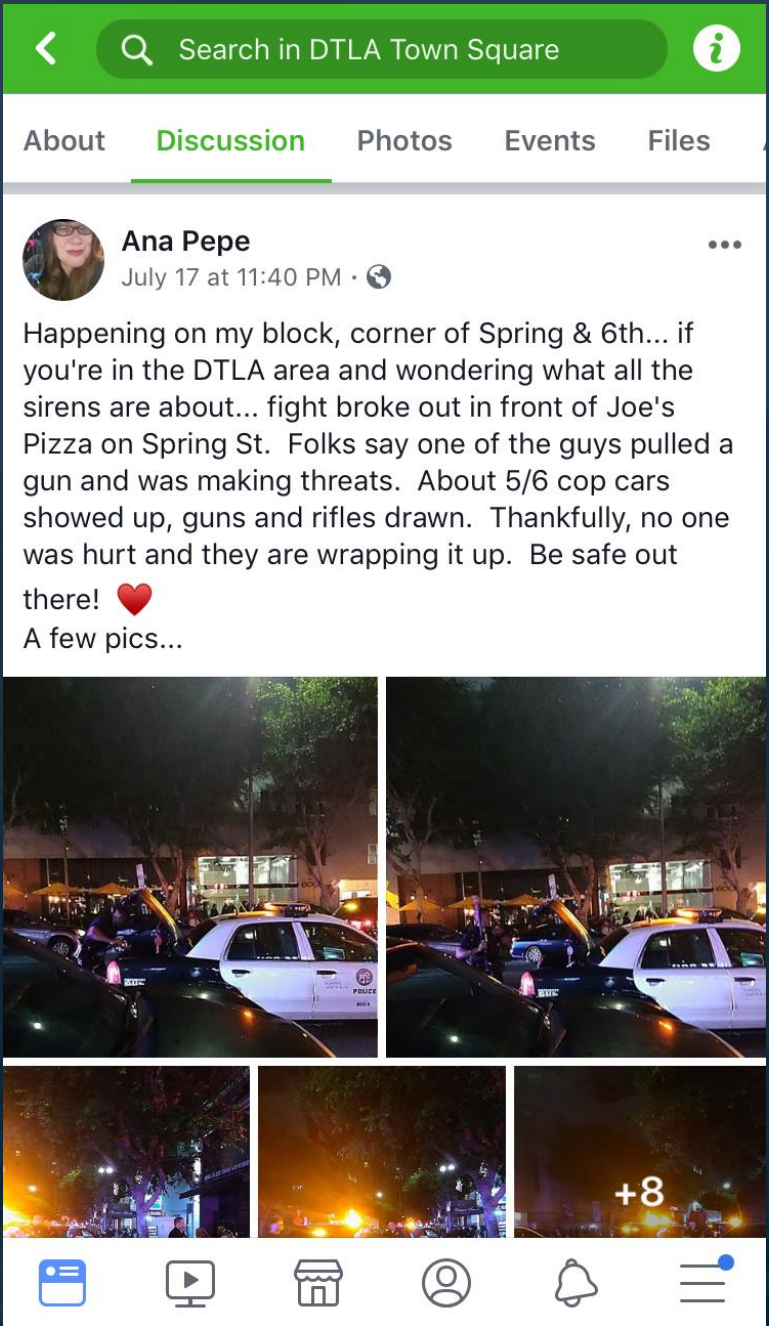

Huge THANK YOU to the unknown good samaritan who gave this piece of shit a dose of his own medicine.

From a person who lives in my building: "Just thought I'd mention to everyone that an elderly woman was punched in the head without provocation an hour ago in front of Walgreen's at 5th/Broadway. Assailant was a black male with a shaved head, who walked calmly away afterwards down 5th Street. Police and paramedics were called. So you might want to consider the addition of boxing headgear to your spring fashion accessories." This is really a total bummer that this happened. Grrrrr

Last night was the moment I realized that, after my lease ends, I may have to REALLY consider leaving DTLA. What happened: 2 guy friends and I were walking from Spring to Freehand. On the way to there, on 8th, I spotted a group of guys on the sidewalk up ahead, they flanked each side. The guys on the left side looked at me then nodded at the guy on the right side, who leaned against a parked car. He then nodded back, looked in our direction (we're still a few yards away), then reached into the car and grabbed something. He turned back to us, barely concealing a knife. I had already been drinking, but my military training and pure instinct kicked in and I just broke and ran across the street. My guy friends yelled after me, following, and I had to yell back "He has a knife. They were going to rob us." Of course the men heard me and you can tell they were aiming to move and attempt elsewhere. I had fun the rest of the night but I couldn't shake the feeling of not being safe, even when I got home. I guess, this isn't a post of me demanding action or yelling at anyone for any perceived lack of action, just....to say I'm starting to give up. If DTLA is going to turn into Arkham because of inaction, then I don't want to be here for that.

FYI, The neighborhood around 5th and Broadway has been very unsafe lately. Combination of a group of homeless living around the park getting bolder and bolder, stealing and fighting right out in the streets, and a new group of severely mentally ill people in the area.

Case in point, the food truck on 5th between Broadway and Hill every night, had its windows smashed last night because the owner wouldn't give free food to a vagrant.

This poor guy works really hard every night and always cleans up the sidewalks around his truck after he finishes for the night. He also helps several homeless in the area. He didn't deserve this. If you guys get a chance maybe stop by his truck and show him some love.

Suspect description: male with skateboard wearing only shorts

BEWARE: This man attempted to attack me at 4th & Broadway and is extremely violent and dangerous. Evidently, I was walking by while he was stealing a bike. He stopped me and said that I looked at him the wrong way and tried to swing at me before I snapped these pictures. He backed off after I threatened to call the LAPD who were contacted.

Just wanted to provide photos of this new dangerous transient making himself about the Historic Core. He attempted to assault a Senior Citizen in front of Starbucks at 6th & Spring. The HC BID patrol were right there to witness him. Next, he rammed his shopping cart into the Hayward Manor, Spring St. entrance- glass doors. No damages. This man is out of control and appears violent! #LAPD be on lookout! Slo Martinez

LA CAFE ATTACK - This man photographed chased a woman from the parking lot beside SB Spring across the busy street into LA Cafe about 5:15pm this evening. The lady ran screaming behind the counter hoping the restaurant staff would help! The suspect ran behind the counter in an attempt to assault her while he was high on drugs! He refused to budge once he got into the food prep area in the kitchen where he tossed food and objects! The brave manager dragged him out with several employees through the side door, through the parking garage and out into the parking lot beside the Spring Tower Lofts! The LA Cafe staff called LAPD 911 and waited with the suspect for a whole 20 minutes until LAPD arrived! Not only was the unsuspecting woman a victim? But, also the LA Cafe Staff who are not really well equipped for these type of "regular" incidents since Prop 47 allowed dangerous criminals to roam free in our DTLA streets! The suspect was handcuffed by 5:35pm and taken in. #ReverseProp47 Miguel Santiago

2nd Stabbing this Summer at "7-11" on Olive & 7th St.! Apparently on Sunday evening a transient men began fighting over the microwave with the victim at the Mandel Bld. location! While screaming at each other inside the store he pulled a knife out and began to stab repeatedly until the other man fell in submission! The cashier at the store cleaned a pool of blood and has the incident on video! It is unclear from LAPD whether the assailant was caught? The store recently held news when they erected a fence around the corner where transients sat causing discomfort for Mandel residents and crime! A "7-11" Security guard was stabbed in May at the same location.
